Thematic session 2: New forms of learning

Monday, 21 June 2021:
13.30 - 15.30

We are all need to be learners in today's world where smart technologies pervade every aspect of life, where technological progress influences the way we work and where we all face challenges such as the current pandemic and climate change.

While many of us are motivated to learn and interested in learning, this is not the case for everyone. To engage people in learning and motivate them to keep on learning, we need to create meaningful and engaging learning environments. Such environments will foster positive attitudes towards learning and can incentivise people with negative experiences of learning to engage with it once again. We need to create such learning environments in initial and continuing education and training to incentivise people to keep learning throughout their lives.

Learning environments become meaningful when they offer relevant learning content in an authentic context. They become engaging when they invite learners to explore, to try new things, to make mistakes, to collaborate and to take ownership of their own learning process.

We need to create systems that support the wider use of meaningful and engaging learning environments.

Objectives:

In this session we will share examples of meaningful and engaging learning environments, discuss the need for this kind of environment, and address the following question:

What conditions are required at system level to facilitate and encourage the development and implementation of more meaningful and engaging learning environments?
