The New regulatory framework VET Law/Law on Crafts

Sonila Limaj

Director, National Agency of VET and Qualifications

Budva, Montenegro, 27th October 2017

Why a new regulatory Framework?

-  New institutional architecture responsible for VET
-  New dynamics of development in VET not covered by the existing legislation
-  Economic and labour market developments in the country
-  EU priorities and instruments required changes in the legislation

Apprenticeship/WBL in the VET Law

Article 22

- Recognizes dual VET that is offered in cooperation with the private sector
- Identifies the two learning environments and responsibilities of the company and the school
- Regulates the work and remuneration upon the apprenticeship contract as defined in the Labor Code
- Further regulations are adopted by the Council of Ministers

Apprenticeship/WBL in the VET Law

Article 12

- Stipulates all different forms of VET and other training programmes that VET institutions can offer
- Recognizes schools and companies as training institutions

Article 13

- Stipulates the constituency and responsibilities of the VET provider's board

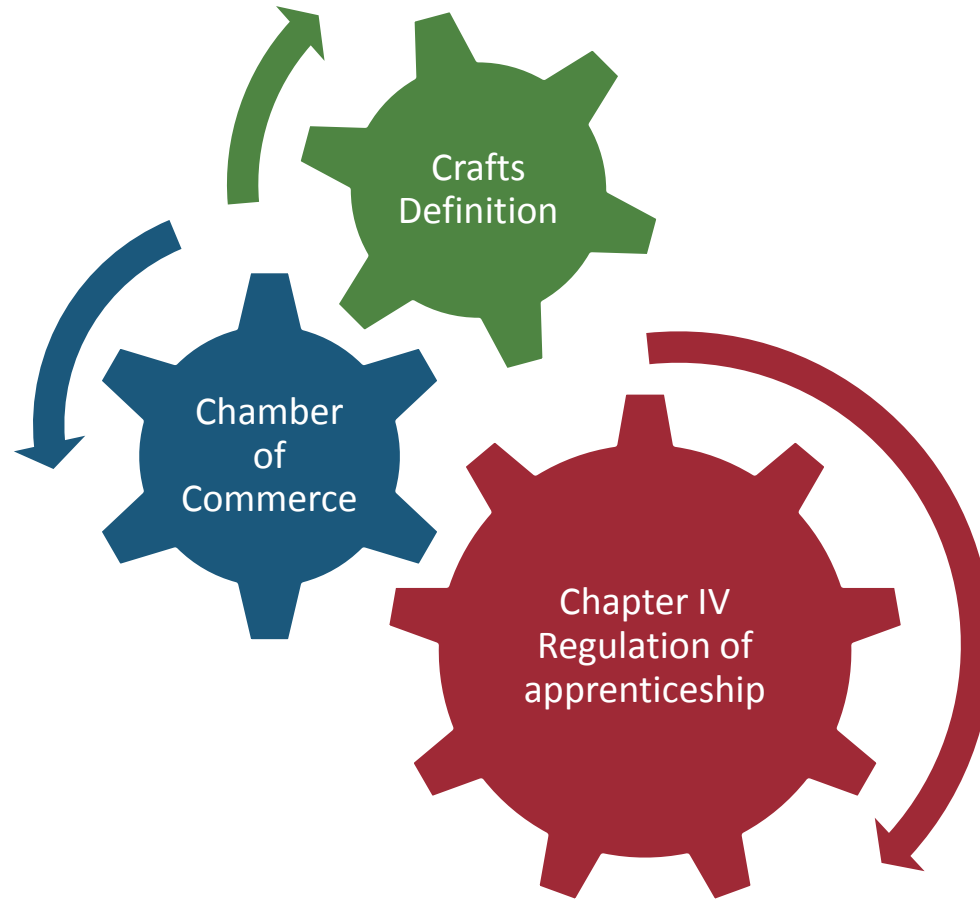

Apprenticeship/WBL in the VET Law

Article 15 – School development unit

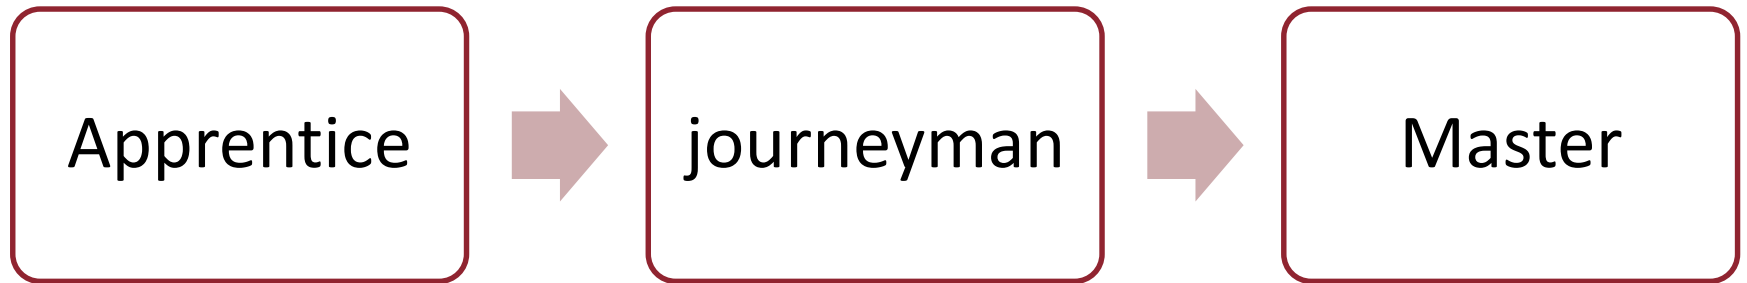

Responsibilities:

- Coordination of the relationship between VET providers and social partners
- VET providers' marketing
- CPD of VET teachers/instructors/curriculum development
- Career guidance
- Tracking employability of graduates

The Law on Crafts

Apprenticeship in the Crafts Law

Apprenticeship in the Crafts Law

Chapter IV, Article 11-22

- Clear entry requirements for apprentices, journeymen and masters
- Clear regulation of the apprenticeship
- Certification by the Chamber of Crafts
- Register of apprentices, journeymen and masters

Apprenticeship in the Crafts Law

Success factors:

- Craftsmanship clearly regulated as a sector
- Mandatory membership in the Chamber
- Chamber representing smaller and smallest companies in the sector

Risk factors:

- Lack of understanding by businesses of the sector
- Lack of capacities to offer an appropriate qualification
